FLOWER BULBS

CULTURAL DIRECTIONS

The Gladiolus is a flower of easy culture and does well in any soil, but should be planted in full exposure to the sun. Bulbs should be planted from four to six inches deep, and three to four inches apart. They may be set out as soon as the frost is out of the ground, and until about June 1.

The more the soil is worked and fertilized the better the result will be. If stable manure is to be used it should be spaded in, in the fall previous to spring planting. Good results are obtained from the use of commercial fertilizer applied at the time of planting.

Unless the soil is very light and sandy, or the season is abnormally dry, good results should be forthcoming without watering. If watering is done, it should be in the evenings only, and the ground should be thoroughly drenched.

When cutting the flowers, care must be taken not to lift, or disturb the bulbs. Cut the flowers as soon as the first bud has entirely opened; leaving at least four leaves on the stem of the plant, to help mature the bulb.

Bulbs may be dug as soon as the foliage begins to turn brown, or, after a frost has stopped the growth. Cut the stems off close to the bulb, and place them where they will have plenty of air to dry; preferably in a shady place. When thoroughly dry the old bulb and roots may be removed easily. Store in a cool dry place where they will be safe from frost.

To give entire satisfaction, let me suggest early ordering. The stock of choice varieties is often limited, and cheaper varieties are in great demand.

Prices quoted are for clean mature stock of sufficient size to produce good blooms. It is not always the large bulbs that produce the best flowers. Some varieties even produce the best flowers from small bulbs.

Every effort is made to keep the stock true to name. Any bulbs not proving satisfactory in this respect will be replaced free of charge. For the prices quoted, bulbs will be delivered free to all points in the U. S. A. One half dozen furnished at the dozen rate.

No orders of less than fifty cents can be accepted.

Remittance should be sent with order, or before shipment is made.

Prices will be furnished on application, to customers desiring to purchase large quantities, or planting stock, of any of the varieties listed.

PRIMULINUS HYBRIDS

In the year 1889 there was discovered in South Africa a new and rare specie of Gladiolus which was named Primulinus. The color of this was a clear primrose yellow. The form of this flower is distinctive, the upper petal drooping forward. Dainty and beautiful varieties have been obtained from crossing this Primulinus (species) on garden varieties.

They are remarkable for their beautiful pastel shades of orange, red, and yellow. The flowers are graceful, the plants vigorous and prolific.
